Mattamuskeet School Hosts Hyde Heritage Day

The School Improvement Team is planning a "HYDE HERITAGE DAY" for April 11, 2014. We would like to have many displays/information stations for our students to walk around and look at and learn more about HYDE COUNTY and the rich bounties of our history. The ages will be from Pre K to 5th graders. Our hopes are to have displays both outside and inside with as many hands on activities as possible. I was wondering if you have anything that you could share or if you have another contact that I should get in touch with.

Any suggestions or programs that you could offer would be appreciated.

The coffeehouse is a smoke free, alcohol free family oriented listening room that showcases performances and weekly jams. For more information, www.bctma.org and www.unionalleycoffee.com.

Photography Show at Brown Library Features the Beaufort County

Washington NC: Washington's Brown Library is hosting a photographic and informational exhibit in its viewing room for the months of March and April. The subject is the Beaufort County Traditional Music Association.

Bob Hopkins, a retired commercial photographer, has been photographing the traditional music "jam" for the last four months. The BCTMA regularly plays on Thursday nights and Saturday morning at the Union Alley Coffee House, located in the Inner Banks Artisans' Center, 158 W. Main Street.

When asked how he became involved in the group, Bob explained "I do a 'camera' walk daily around the waterfront. One Saturday, I wandered into the Inner Banks shops and discovered a group playing in the coffee shop and became a 'groupie'. They are an incredible mix of musicians and characters that play a brand of music called 'fun'. It is an experience I recommend for everyone."

This is Bob's fourth exhibit in the Brown Library since retiring to Washington three years ago. His first was a 78 piece hanging titled From Viet Nam to Washington. Last summer, Bob produced Bits and Pieces, a photographic journal of the Finger Lakes region of New York.

Ocracoke Festival Announces 2014 Performer Lineup & Invites Sponsorship
(Deadline for inclusion in program is April 25)

OCRACOE, NC.--The 15th annual Ocracoke Festival will showcase new and returning artists this year on Ocracoke Island, NC, on June 6-8, 2014. The weekend is presented by Ocracoke Alive, and celebrates music, storytelling, and artisans from the NC coastal region and beyond. The Ocracoke Festival was rated as one of the top fifteen island festivals in the world in Coastal Living Magazine.

The 2014 Ocracoke Festival is also seeking individual and business sponsorships. "Every year we try to bring back favorites from past seasons and add a spark of something new," says director David Tweedie. "In addition to our heartfelt thanks and press recognition, sponsors can receive tickets to the Friday Night Fish Fry and special seating at Saturday night Ocrachicks or Donald Davis performances, sailing trips on the Skipjack Wilma Lee, and supporter buttons and T-shirts. Best of all, donors help ensure that this great event can happen for another year." The festival is financed with donations, grants, admission buttons, merchandise sales and fundraisers.

Interested contributors can find out more information on donation levels at <http://www.ocracokealive.org/ocracokefestivalsponsors.cfm>, and can donate online or by mail. To view a pdf of 2014 Sponsorship Opportunities click here. The press deadline for contributors for inclusion in the program is April 25.

New performers this year include Mipso, The Carolina Broadcasters, Finley Woolston and the Joyful Band of Singers, and a Pirate Invasion joining the ranks of returning favorites . . . festival hosts Molasses Creek, storyteller Donald Davis, Caravan of Thieves, Cassie & Maggie MacDonald, Shana Tucker, The Outliers, The Alberti Flea Circus, Paper-hand Puppets, Beleza, Craicdown, L Shape Lot, Jacob Johnson, The Green Grass Cloggers, Martin Garrish, Bob Zentz, John Golden, Philip Howard, Capt. Rob Temple & Sundae Horn, Chainsaw Artist Clyde Jones, Jef the Mime, Ocrachicks, the Ocracoke Jazz Society and more.

Artisans in and around the festival grounds will showcase fine arts and crafts in painting, sculpture, wood carving, jewelry, textiles and more, and food will be available by some of Ocracoke's finest eateries.

For more details visit the festival website at www.ocracokealive.org.

Recipients of the 2014 Hyde County Chamber of Commerce Tourism award, Ocracoke Alive, Inc., is a private non-profit committed to enriching the Ocracoke Island community through the encouraging and sponsoring cultural, artistic, educational, and environmental activities including the production of plays, musicals, musical events, exhibits, schools, workshops, and festivals.

Changes Coming To Health Care Facilities On Hatteras And Ocracoke

By IRENE NOLAN

Both the Hatteras Village Medical Center and the Ocracoke Health Center will see some changes in operations this spring.

The Hatteras center will see a change in the health care provider, and the Ocracoke center will have expanded hours, but will no longer have an after-hours, on-call provider.

The Hatteras village center just re-opened on Nov. 25 with physician's assistant Margaret Jazayeri as the provider.

Dennis Robinson, a member of the center's board and president of the Hatteras Village Civic Association, says that Jazayeri will be leaving this week. He said that she gave the required 60 days notice.

"Hatteras Island was just not a good fit for her or her family," Robinson said.

The medical center will be closed the first week in April and will re-open on April 7 with a new provider, nurse practitioner Gail Covington, who has worked at the Ocracoke Health Center since 2009.

Robinson said that Covington spent time at the Hatteras center in the early 1990s and has experience in health care in remote locations.

She has a bachelor of science in nursing from East Carolina University and a master's degree in nursing and a post master's certificate from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Her experience also includes five years at the Minute Clinic in Raleigh, Durham, Greensboro, and Winston-Salem where she provided primary care and set up and opened seven new clinics; seven years at a gynecologic, obstetrical, and primary care provider as the Wendover ob/gyn and infertility clinic in Greensboro; five years at First Health of the Carolinas Montgomery Women's Health Service in Troy, N.C., where she set up the clinic and provided care at a remote rural location, and six years at Hampton and Lewis ob/gyn and infertility clinic in Oxford, N.C.

Covington will commute from Ocracoke, but Robinson said that she well knows that the Hatteras-Ocracoke ferry can't always run. She will set up a place to stay at the medical center, where she will spend the night when necessary.

"Finances are really tight, and it will be a bumpy road for while," Robinson said.

"We're still in need of community support," he said, "both financial and having folks visit the center."

Part of the finance problem, he said, is that health insurers have been slow on reimbursements since the center opened.

The Hatteras Village Medical Center will be open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. until noon and from 1 until 5 p.m. It will be closed on holidays, including Thanksgiving and the day after.

The phone number is 252-986-2756, which is the same one the medical center had in its former life.

The Ocracoke Health Center will expand its clinic hours, beginning June 2. The clinic will be open from 8 a.m. to noon and 1 until 7 p.m. and from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. on Saturday.

The expanded hours will be offered in order to reduce the need of the after-hours, on-call provider service that the clinic has provided for many years. The Ocracoke Health Center will be discontinuing this after-hours, on-call provider service beginning April 1.

The Health Center will utilize an after-hours nurse call line. When patients seek after-hours medical advice, they will be able to call 252-928-SICK and talk directly to a nurse for assistance. The nurse will be able to guide the patient as to whether the patient needs further medical service, such as Emergency Medical Services, or if the problem can be treated during regular office hours. The Health Center is also planning on a limited after-hours provider on-call service during weekend hours. During that time, all true emergencies will continue to be referred to 911 and EMS services, and the on-call provider would be available for urgent medical care as needed.

According to a news release from the health center, "Since 2003, the health center has employed two, full-time, medical providers that alternately worked in the clinic and provided after-hours care. In place of costly, per hour on-call service, the providers were paid full time salaries with full-time benefits. This system worked well for many years.

"But over the last several years, the decrease in income generated by after-hours visits, the strain on occupancy tax funding and the lack of grant funding for after-hours, has left us with insufficient funding to cover the costs of after-hours care."

The release notes that after-hours service was carefully scrutinized for cost effectiveness and utilization and that the need for the service has progressively declined.

The Clinic Medical Director, Dr. Erin Baker, along with the Board of Directors and Cheryl Ballance, CEO, determined that expanded hours and a Saturday clinic would cover the majority of the visits we reviewed. Over the last three years only 7 percent of total patient visits were made as after-hours visits.

According to the release, the center "welcomes community input and concerns and will make arrangements to meet with all individuals who have concerns about their care."

WHO WILL PAY FOR LIFEGUARDS? By Sundae Horn/Ocracoke Current

NPS may contract out lifeguards and ask Ocracoke to foot (some of) the bill.

Ocracoke faces the possibility of cost-sharing with the Park Service to provide seven-days-a-week lifeguard coverage from Memorial Day to Labor Day this season.

Lonely without its lifeguards.

"Contracting for lifeguards is an avenue we are pursuing," said Cape Hatteras National Seashore's superintendent Barclay Trimble in a phone interview today.

Trimble said he is working on putting the job out for bids sometime next week. He has talked to at least one private company to get some ballpark figures for contracted services.

"$85,000 is a number that's been floating around," he said. "It was a possible bid option we received, but it's not a firm number."

That estimated amount would cover lifeguards at all three beaches (Coquina, Buxton, and Ocracoke) for five days a week, with an anticipated start date of Memorial Day weekend.

Hiring lifeguards as NPS employees for the Seashore's three guarded beaches "won't happen," Trimble said. "It's too late for our hiring process – we are far past the deadline to hire our own."

The proposal for contract lifeguards will go out with the parameters of dates and hours for lifeguard duty. Trimble says he won't know until the bids start coming in whether or not NPS can pay for a full week of coverage.

If not, it will be up to the local communities to pay for the difference if they want more fulltime protection at the beach.

Trimble said that the company he talked to gave him a ballpark figure of $10,000 for Ocracoke to cover two days of lifeguards.

At last week's Occupancy Tax Board meeting, the board carried a motion to appropriate those funds if necessary.

"I'd like to see the commissioners approve the $10,000 with the stipulation that we don't want to spend it," said Hyde County manager Bill Rich. "But we also don't want to see just five days of lifeguards. That doesn't make any sense."

Bill said that if the county were to help with funding lifeguards, they would want to give the money to the Park Service.

Trimble says it's too late for that.

"The money wouldn't come to us," he said. "If the community wants to extend the days, then Ocracoke Civic and Business or Hyde County would need to go directly to the contracting entity and set up their own contract for lifeguard services for the days not covered by us."

Trimble expects it to be a few weeks before bids start coming in and further decisions will be made. I asked Trimble if he'd been receiving the emails from Ocracoke Civic and Business Association's online petition, and he said yes. He's also heard from the Dare County manager, gotten "a few" emails from Seashore residents and visitors, and been in contact with Congressman Walter Jones's office.

When I interviewed Trimble for my March 8th article he was adamant that the Seashore did not have any money for lifeguards this year. He reiterated that position in a conference call at the March 12th OCBA meeting, stating that NPS had housing and equipment available if OCBA had the money to hire lifeguards.

At the meeting, OCBA members urged him to find the money in the budget, perhaps in the ORV permit funds. Trimble said that money goes into beach access funding. "That $2 million is not available," he said. "I can't touch it." He also added that although lifeguards aren't in the ORV permit budget, perhaps that could be amended down the line.

"I'm more than happy to talk about cost-sharing," he said then, but did not mention contracted lifeguards or $10,000. He was asking for the whole enchilada to cover lifeguards on Ocracoke.

At the meeting, Trimble heard from Ocracoke residents and business owners about how disappointed they were in his budget decisions.

"How did you come to the decision that lifeguards are less important than any other service you provide?" asked Bill Jones. "The number of visitors who interact with lifeguards is far greater than the number of visitors who interact with interpretive rangers."

Dick Jacoby brought up his concern about firefighters going in the water. As president of Ocracoke Fire and Protection Association and a member of Ocracoke VFD, Dick reported that OVFD members have no ocean rescue training and no equipment. But they are paged by the county and respond to beach emergencies.

Photo sent to us by Leonard

Conover. Is this an acceptable substitute?

"My guys are not going to hesitate to go into the water," Dick said. "That's putting them at risk."

Trimble assured the OCBA members that NPS law enforcement rangers would respond to emergencies and would indeed go into the water to rescue swimmers, even if it means taking off their guns and bullet-proof vests to do it. He also suggested that throw rings are an option at the beach and that Hatteras Village was considering them.

And in an epic moment of buck-passing, Trimble reminded the OCBA crowd that the ocean is not actually in the National Park Service's jurisdiction. "State waters are where drownings will occur," he said. "We're not mandated to protect those waters." So – what happened between March 12th (when no money was available for lifeguards) and March 26th (when Trimble might possibly find some cash in the budget for part-time lifeguards)?

"Most conversations about the lifeguards came after your article," he told me. (Woo-Woo!)

My March 8th article, which was followed up by the OCBA petition posted on March 14th, brought the response Trimble said he'd been waiting for.

"That's actually what we were hoping would happen early on," he said. "That's why we put the press release out in November."

All babies deserve lifeguards! These two are enjoying the lifeguard beach c. 2007. Awww, little Beatrice and Mariah. Weren't they cute?

Trimble said he wanted to pursue the possibility of cost-sharing from the beginning.

"I never intended to blindsides the public," he said. "I didn't want to wait until spring to announce that there wouldn't be lifeguards."

Trimble says that after the November press release that he "got a letter from Ocracoke's Occupancy Tax Board in December or January. I wrote back to them, and never heard back," he said. "The money never came, so now it's too late to hire lifeguards for this year, and we are looking at contracting them." When the bids come in, Trimble will need to make more decisions about spending. Whatever money he does use for lifeguards will come out of his appropriated budget, and take away from other programs he wanted to fund.

"We really don't know yet what we're going to be able to do," he said.
